

I support ARRL RM-10867 petition. It is well thought out for growth of amateur radio. Young people, who are needed for the growth of the hobby, have a number of hi tech communication devices, such as the internet, walky talky cell phone, etc. and they appear to turn to these methods rather than enter ham radio. The morse code requirement is antiquated and the US should follow the lead of other countries in dropping the requirement. Nothing will stop or should stop those who currently use cw to continue communicating in tha manner.